DECISIONS, OPINIONS AND INTERPRETATIONS

The basic responsibility for the eligibility of individual athletes rests with the administrative representative of each member college. While there is a responsibility on the student for the statements contained on his/her eligibility application which the student athlete signs, this does not necessarily place all of the responsibility on the athlete and remove the college, and/or the college official handling eligibility from ultimate responsibility. However, college officials responsible for determining eligibility may seek interpretations and rulings from the Conference Commissioner whenever a situation arises where they may have some doubt.

Telephone calls and personal conversations may not be used to substantiate or support an action. Colleges should always maintain supporting records for each individual athlete where there may be a possibility for future questions, and copies should be filed with the Conference Commissioner. No athlete whose eligibility is in question may compete until a ruling has been rendered by the appropriate body in his/her favor. This ruling must be in writing.
